

2020 Emmys Sparkle but Make it Quarantine: Who Wore it Best?

Inside look at who wore it best at the 2020 Emmys, from the comfort of everyone’s homes.

By Aria McClure on September 22nd

Yara Shahidi, Prada

Zendaya, Giorgio Armani Privé

The 2020 Emmys have come and gone on September 20th in Los Angeles, California and the homes of many. While some celebrities joined us on our couches in pajamas like we do every year, others kept with the tradition and glammed it up.

Zendaya’s second look of the night included a black velvet bandeau top covered in pearls and crystals, with a full-length polka dot skirt. This custom-made dress is by Giorgio Armani Privé styled with Jewelry from Bulgari. She pulled it all together by wearing her hair in a messy bun to show the statement earrings.

Yara Shahidi wore an Old Hollywood styled Prada Gown. The dress featured layers of jewels from top to bottom, with feathers placed across the neckline, styled with simple jewelry. Her hair was styled in braids in order to keep attention on the dress.

A quarantine clearly couldn’t stop both girls from shinning in their gorgeous gowns. In order to keep all eyes on their dresses, makeup was kept light and natural.

Who wore it best is the question at hand? Zendaya’s unique combination of sparkle and a weaved polka dotted skirt makes her the winner. Her dress was the perfect mix of young and chic, that worked well with her age. The skirt and top complemented each other beautifully for a modern and fun look. There was strong a harmony between the dress and her accessories on her big night.

